DIRECTOR'S NOTE

A play is a play, a specific product of its author's imagination, and it must be accepted for its own merits and criticized for its own faults. It has its own world and its own personality and cannot be expected to conform to real life, any other play, or to personal preferences other than the author's. The world of Thieves' Carnival is a fanciful one, full of strange shapes and striking colors, instant disguises and background music, and — most of all — the funny and frightfully frenetic activity of total leisure. Relax and enjoy this world for two hours.
